Fr. Banet Challenges 251 Grads; Calls For Personal Responsibility

Fr. Charles H. Banet, president of the College, called upon the 251 graduating members of the class of 1968 to "develop a sense of personal responsibility" during the College's 73rd annual commencement exercises on June 2 in the Alumni Fieldhouse.

In his address, the president challenged the graduates to bring to the world an increasing sense of personal and social responsibility, "nurtured with courage, charity and sympathy. If you develop this type of responsibility, you will be helping to reform this world."

Father Banet also read a message sent to the graduates by United States President Lyndon B. Johnson. President Johnson congratulated the seniors, noting that "few moments equal the joy of graduation. We live in a complex world beset with serious problems, but I am confident that as you have demonstrated the qualities of leadership in achieving your college degrees, you can help our nation play a constructive and meaningful role in this community of nations on earth today."

Bartholomew Sung-Hong Ng of North Point, Hong Kong, delivered the valedictory address. He congratulated his classmates upon their achievements and said "you now enter a totally new experience. You must give your best in the challenges that lie ahead of you, always applying the principles and knowledge you have gained here."

In other ceremonies, the tenth conferral of the Alumni Merit Award went to Herman W. Reas, M.D., of Defiance, O. Dr. Reas, a 1949 graduate of Saint Joseph's, has won professional acclaim for his role in the development of N-Acetylcysteine, a drug which liquefies the thick mucus which frequently clogs the lungs and bronchial tubes of cystic fibrosis patients. In 1960, Dr. Reas founded the Cystic Fibrosis Care, Teaching and Research Clinic at St. Louis Children's Hospital of the Washington University School of Medicine.

The Senior-of-the-Year Award, sponsored by the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association, was presented to Raymond Kulla, an English major from Arlington Heights, Ill. The honor was bestowed by Robert Conley '41, president of the Alumni Association.

Accounting Alumni Contribute $1,265

Twenty-two Saint Joseph's alumni employed by the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen and Company recently conducted an intra-office campaign to raise funds for their Alma Mater. On July 5, Hank Murphy '60, manager in the firm's Chicago office, forwarded a check to the College's president for $1,265.00 representing the donations of the alumni and matching funds from Arthur Andersen.

It was the second annual alumni contribution drive among the College's graduates employed by the firm. There are presently 31 alumni with the firm, excluding six 1968 graduates who will join Arthur Andersen this summer. Contributions were received from all alumni with the company except those on military leave.

Arthur Andersen and Company is one of over 400 American corporations and business firms which match individual alumni contributions to their alma maters. The Saint Joseph's graduates at Arthur Andersen made use of the firm's matching grant program to double their donation.

The gift will be used to purchase books and new equipment for the College's accounting laboratory.

Rep. Charles A. Halleck and Rensselaer Mayor Malcom Roth. Other events in Fr. Heiman's honor were a concert presented by the students at the Summer Institute of Liturgical Music, of which he is the director, a Mass, and a dinner.

Two delegates from Rome attended the ceremonies: Fr. Arturo Gerace, Procurator General of the Society of the Precious Blood, and Fr. Pietro Mercurio, Secretary General of the Society. Also attending were several present and past national officers of the Catholic Music Educators Association.

Fr. Heiman, who has been at Saint Joseph's since 1944, will spend the next year in Rome at the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music where he will do work on his doctorate.

Department Of History Announces Plans For Two International Tours

Father Donald Shea, chairman of the History Department, has revealed the details of a plan which will enable Saint Joseph's students to participate in either of two independent study tours, one of Europe and the other of South America, during the January, 1969, interterm session.

The announcement comes in the wake of last January's highly successful independent study tour of Europe, also sponsored by the History Department. That tour enrolled 73 participants, including 65 Saint Joseph's students.

The January, 1969, study tours both offer three hours of independent study academic credit. The tuition charge will be included in the second semester class load to the limit of 17 hours, and students' grades will be based on a research paper, appropriate to their major fields of study, to be written during the spring semester. Both tours are open to all students regardless of major or class.

The European tour, which adds visits to West Berlin, East Berlin and Austria to last winter's tour, will run Jan. 7-27, while the South Amer-

Alumnus Honored With Brotherhood Award

Thomas H. Menten, a member of Saint Joseph's class of 1909, has been honored by the New Hampshire Chapter of the Conference of Christians and Jews with the 1968 Brotherhood Award. The honor was bestowed June 1 at the annual Brotherhood Dinner in Concord, N.H., in recognition of Tom's many outstanding contributions toward the promotion of good will and understanding among people.

Since retiring as a major sales executive from Swift and Company, Tom, now 79, has continued to invest his energy in the needs of people. In 1953, after moving to Barrington, N.H., where he now lives, Tom became engaged in building the new Chapel of the Nativity and in organizing religion classes for his townsfolk. Two years ago he was appointed a regional representative on the Diocesan CCD Board.

Tom and his wife Gladys were recently presented with the Pro Deo et Juventute Medal at the New England Young Adult Congress. The national award was conferred upon the Mentens for the giving of their time and talent to youth and God.

In 1967, as General Chairman of the 21st annual New England Congress of Religious Education, Tom planned and executed a unique program which drew 7,000 people in search of Christian maturity to the campus of the University of New Hampshire. Those who work with him testify: "He is a man for all seasons."

College Grants Six Scholarships To Aid Disadvantaged Students

Following the April 4 assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Saint Joseph's College held a memorial mass at which Father Charles Banet, President, called for the College to become more closely involved with the civil rights movement.

Father Ernest Ranly, chairman of the Philosophy Department, explains that this was the spark behind his proposal given the President's Administrative Council on April 21. The proposal called for the granting of full scholarships for the 1968 summer session to ten disadvantaged Black students from the Chicago area.

The Council approved Father Ranly's proposal and instructed him to make the necessary contacts to put the program into operation. Working through the Tri-Faith Employment Service in Chicago and Msgr. Evans of Presentation Parish, Father Ranly secured the enrollment of six students in the program. Four of the students are graduates of John Marshall High School, while the other two are Crane High School graduates.

The scholarships for the program include tuition, room and board. The students are taking classes which are part of Saint Joseph's regular six-week summer session.

Father Paul White, Executive Vice President of the College, explains the reasoning behind the program in this way: "In relation to the hard-core unemployment problem, Saint Joseph's regards as part of its responsibility to society the making available of educational opportunities to students who otherwise could not afford to undertake higher education on their own."

Father White adds that students participating in the program were brought to Saint Joseph's through a careful selection process. "We wanted to involve those students whom we feel have the best promise of successfully meeting the demands of a college curriculum. These students are brought here with the idea of performing well during the summer, then staying with us during the regular school year which opens in September."

Saint Joseph's Receives $16,700 To Establish Computer Network

The National Science Foundation at Washington, D.C., has announced that Saint Joseph's College will receive $16,700 to establish a computer network terminal which will link the College to the powerful computer facilities at Purdue University.

Purdue's giant CDC 6500 and IBM 7094, which together comprise the greatest computer capabilities in the state, will serve a total of 16 participants in the Indiana Regional Computer Network (IRCN).

Kenneth Zawodny, director of the Computer Center at Saint Joseph's, said the link to the Purdue computers would be advantageous primarily as an educational tool. Since its establishment two years ago, interest in the College's computer sciences program has increased rapidly. Next year, about 14 percent of all students on campus will be enrolled in one or more computer courses.

Computer science students now make use of the College's IBM 1130, a computer capable of solving problems written in two computer languages. This September, after the new network is in operation, it will be possible to instruct students in several additional computer languages.

For its input and output unit, Saint Joseph's will use a teletypewriter terminal which will be connected by a telephone line to the Purdue facilities.

The computer network project at Saint Joseph's is under the direction of William G. Verbrugge, assistant professor of mathematics.

Sharing Know-How

Alumni Records To Be Computerized

During the summer months, the Alumni Office is converting all alumni files and records to the College's IBM 1130 computer.
